Dennis was born in Waterloo, Iowa to Frederick and Charlene (Weisert) Moore. Dennis was an Airforce branch veteran of the Vietnam war. A life-long learner, his siblings and daughters share that he was always reading and researching. He attended college to study philosophy but also greatly enjoyed studies of world religions, history, and political science. Known by many as “Denny”, he enjoyed fishing, gardening, wood working, playing pool, and solving puzzles. He once overhauled an old van engine by using the schematics obtained from the Iowa City Public Library as a reference. He loved finding treasures through attending auctions and thrifting. Socializing with his buddies over a cup of coffee and perusing the newspaper were daily pleasures. He loved telling stories and discussing the politics of the day.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Frederick and Charlene (Weisert) Moore; his brother, Frederick Moore; his sister, Patricia (Moore) Ledee and brother-in-law, Nestor Ledee; and ex-wife and mother of his daughters, Karen (Melander) Moore.

He is survived by his daughters, Tamara (Bruce) Moore of Boca Raton, Florida; Nicole (Luke) Haberl of Alta, Iowa; his granddaughter, Briann Haberl; his wife, Molita Otilina Mosquera of Washington DC; his siblings, Devan (John) Hanson of Michigan, Carol (Michael) Jacobs of Iowa, and Doren Moore of Iowa; his sister-in-law, Jane Moore; and many beloved nieces and nephews.

“ Dennis and I had some interesting discussions about many things and even if we agreed to disagree we respected each other's opinions. He always gave me something to think about. ”
